MAKIN' IT Story of the Year

MAKIN' FRIENDS

Throughout high school one of the most meaningful things we learn Makin' Friends. Our friends, once made, become many things to us. They are the tired faces in the hall Monday morning that still manage to offer a smile. They are the ones we spend Saturday night driving around with stereo "cranked." They mean more to us than material possessions. We also learn that one day we'll wake up and all our "wild" weekends and experiences will be nothing but memories.

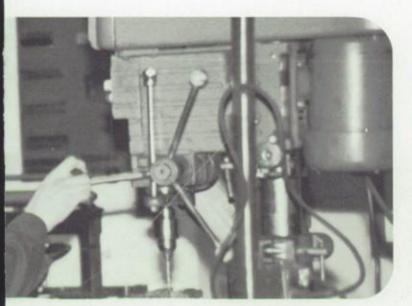

MAKIN' MINDS

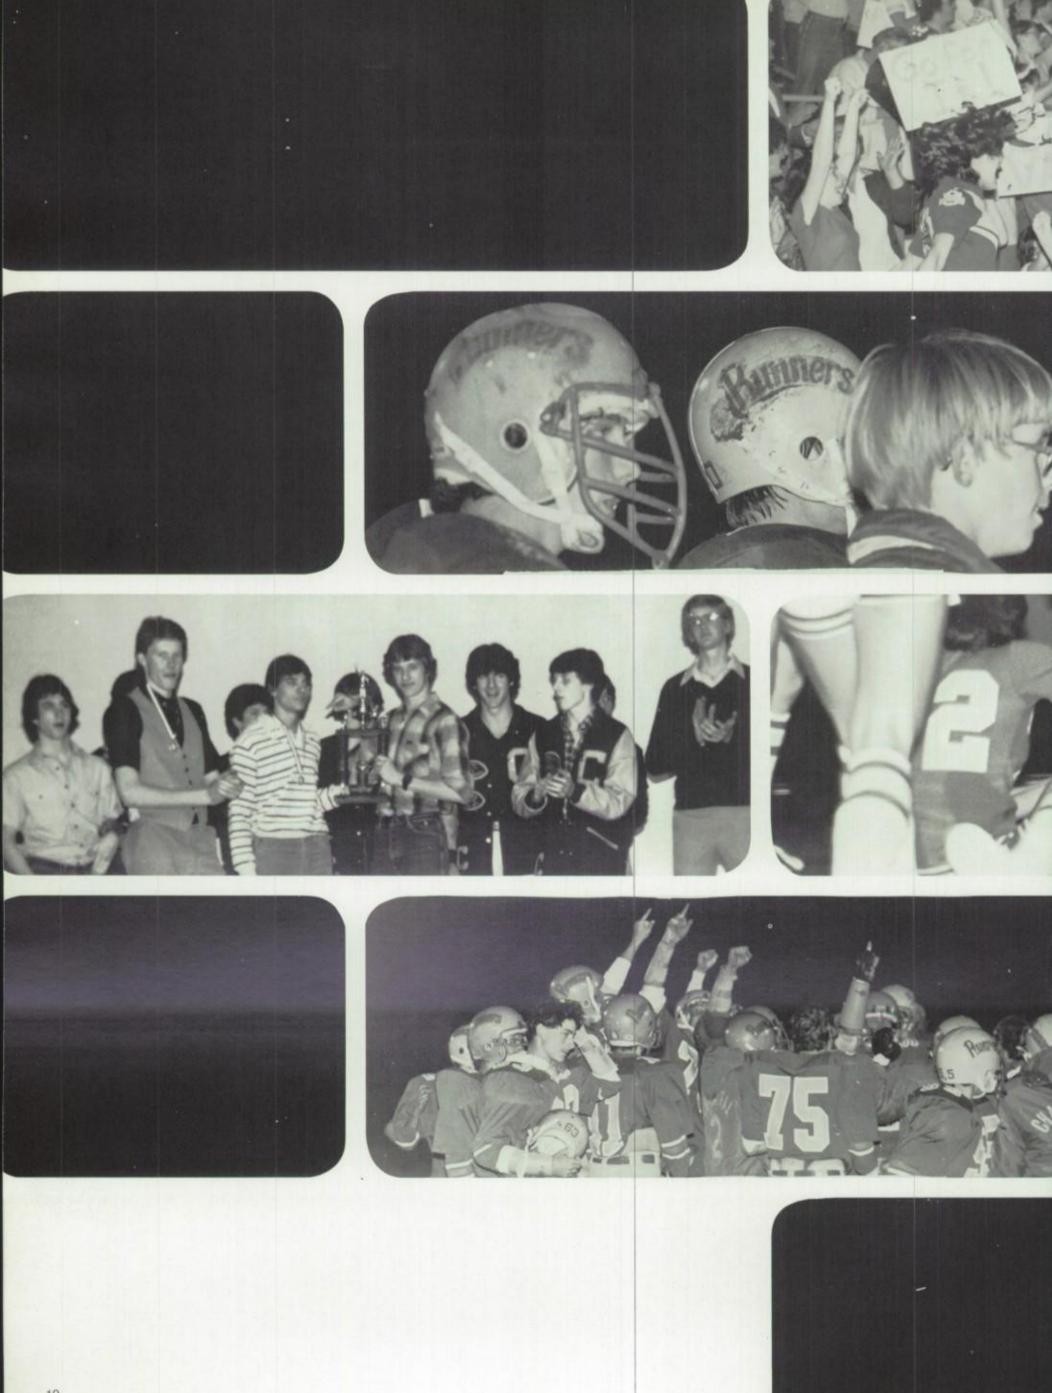

In CHS our teachers are friends. They teach more than what's in the book. Many classes are fun, however we do buckle down and do serious studying. Instead of working against us, our teachers work for us, going out of their way to help. As teachers and students pass each other in the hall, they feel a bond of friendship.

After only eleven years of existence, our school is respected as one of the outstanding schools in Kansas. A bond links together the students and staff. That bond is pride which is growing with the age of the building. The surrounding communities contribute to the level of pride in our school by their interest and support of sports, speech, arts and music . . . all our activities. When we compare students, buildings, communities and pride with other schools, we are thankful that CHS is the place we call home.

MAKIN' OURSELVES PROUD

Makin' It Special: Story of the Year

From Wrestling Championships to Academic Olympics . . . from C.T.L. Football and Basketball Champs to National Merit Scholar . . . from a brand new principal to old time coaches . . . from graduating seniors to incoming freshmen . . . from leaking ceilings to craters in the driveway . . . this year, we've been MAKIN' IT SPECIAL.

Summer Fair

Looking around the Harper County Fair, my eyes are filled with the different types of people. The pungent body odor of these people added to the nausea I was already feeling after riding the Bullet. The smell of popcorn, hot dogs, and cotton candy filled my head, making it swim. I felt the grit and grime clinging to my face from the humid air. My knees trembled like jello as I ran through the street while pushing and shoving my way to the bathroom, barely in time.

Serving Tennis Balls

One of the most difficult aspects of playing tennis is the serve. Many hours of practice must be involved to perfect an effective serve. The task can be made easier by following these simple directions.

First, cook one half pound of hamburger and separate into small chunks. Now pour in two cups of taco sauce. Heat slowly. Next, cube two large tomatoes and add to sauce in pan. Bring sauce to a boil. Spread one cup of shredded lettuce on the serving plate. When sauce boils, turn off stove and prepare three tennis balls. Place balls on plate and pour sauce over them, sprinkling grated cheddar cheese over them after doing so. Serve warm, with a tall glass of ice tea. This recipe makes three servings.

Bad Memories

It started out to be a normal Friday night, just riding around listening to the radio playing our song. It was about 12:15, time to head home to meet the curfew. We had just pulled out into the highway heading west towards Harper when we noticed, there in our lane heading straight for us, a pick-up traveling rather fast. I'll never forget the look on my date's face and in his eyes as if he had seen a ghost. He wasn't sure what to do but natural reflexes made him push my head down into the seat while he gave the steering wheel a hard jerk towards the ditch. I remember screaming out and hearing the screeching tires and the loud noise of metal ripping and clanging as it flew onto the highway. After the jolt, I looked up in time to see the shattering glass falling in on us. All I could hear was the roaring of the engine caused by his foot still on the accelerator.

I can never get into a car without remembering the wreck and praying it will never happen again.

Ragin' into the eighties . . . Pac-Man fever is a video game with cute monsters, eating up all our quarters. Computer games are found at discount stores, late night groceries and fun centers. Feeding this fever, students love the chomp, chomp, chomp of the voracious little Pac-Man. Asteroids and Space-Invaders, also on the list of favorites, hold us captive. But there's no one like Pinky, Blinky, Inky and Clyde — the Pac-Man monsters.

The Slopes

The long weekend at Easter break often gives time for skiing. The 500 mile trip to Vail or Keystone takes hours, but as we turn on the snow packed road high in the mountains, we see the lodge so pretty with snow and icicles and know we are there. Skiers are busy everywhere, practicing turns and new tactics for stopping. Riding up on the lift is a big thrill being thirty-five to forty feet up in the air, and mountain scenery is visible for miles around. Looking at the tops of trees makes me feel I am on the top of the world. I just sit there for a minute, closing my eyes, feeling the warmth of the sun on my face. Far off, I can see skiers shushing down the slopes, leaving trails of scallops in the snow and know that I will soon be with them.

First Date

I stared from our front window at the carlights beaming down the street. The long anticipated car pulled to a stop at the side of the curb. I watched as the dome light came on in the car, I wanted to throw open the door and run out, but one shouldn't seem eager on a first date, so I sat tight. I knew I had blown my cool though, when I pulled open the door in between the "ding" and the "dong" of the doorbell. I stood there staring at the gorgeous male specimen in front of me, too dumbfounded to speak. I had seen him in the halls a million times but this time was different. He asked me if I was ready; it seemed rather obvious, but it sounded like a good question to ask. A congregation of family gathered in the living room to observe the new attraction, but I felt much too selfish to share, and I didn't want their curious stares to scare him away. I followed him to the car at his heels all the way, watching his every move. He led me to the car door and pulled it open for me, impressing me so. The tan Mercury appeared old and big, and a dent in the front fender looked as if it had been there awhile. He jokingly called it his Z-28, and told me he had it custom made, and all the kids at school envied him and his car. His humor began relieving all the first date tension, and I sat back in my seat, feeling my heartbeat return to its regular rhythm. I smiled to myself, feeling quite pleased with myself and very impressed with him.

Smash Hit

The Chaparral Singers put in creative effort in their musical production Guys and Dolls. With difficult songs, costume changes and many lines, the actors were busy and had to be on their toes. A large changeable backdrop kept the stage crew hopping. After weeks of work and with fine expertise, the three hour show was on the boards for two nights, providing entertainment for the Singers and audience.

After a busy year of research, writing, and presenting cases, the debate squad topped off their most successful year yet by winning the ultimate — the state title. The 37 member squad, in their 3rd year under Mr. Gary Harmon had sent teams to a total of 30 tournaments placing in the top four in 24 of the 30.

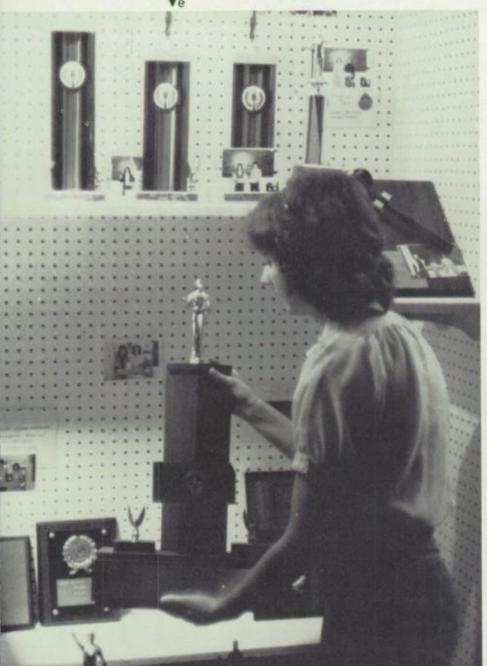

The champion advocates, with Dennis Smithhisler, Deneen Wood, and Susan Blanchat for the affirmative and Sherry Gering, Jonna Gaffney, and Jerry Janet for the negative case, ended the state tournament with a 10-4 record tying Wellington and Baldwin. After taking speaker points and opposition records into consideration, the Chaparral debaters were named victors, CHS's first State Champion Debaters.

You do cry

In a letter written by the '78 senior football players, these words are written: "When the last football game of your life is over, you will cry, just like we did. Don't think you're too tough to cry, 'cause if this letter is being read to you, you're no tougher than we were."

This letter was read to our football team several times over the last three years.

As I listened to that letter my sophomore year, I thought, "Well, I don't have to worry. I've got to make it through two more years first."

And again my junior year, the team was close knit and worked hard together. But after we lost to Fredonia, I realized that the seniors would never play another high school football game.

This last year, we all knew that this our last chance as seniors, and we worked harder than ever. After the final Haven game, my high school football career was over. As I undressed, it was as though I were watching myself, and I knew as I went through my routine that each thing I did would be for the last time... ever.

The seniors went around the locker room saying things like, "Been great playing with ya," "Get 'em next year," and "You're a heck of a player." Some of these guys I had played football with for ten years! Over half of my life! When you're that close to someone for that long, you know them pretty well. As I looked around the locker room after everyone else had left, all I could think of was, "Those '78 seniors were right. You do cry."

Grown Up

Lying in bed one night, a deep feeling struck me. I had changed. The change had been happening for quite a while and I had only then realized it. Now I no longer felt the need for protection. I reminisced about the habitual routine. A sudden wave washed over me. I had grown up, I was no longer the unsure little girl of yesterday. My life had begun to make sense with the pieces of the impossible jigsaw slowly coming together. I had broken the barrier of daddy's little girl and now freely make decisions. Even though my curfew never officially changed, I just returned home when I wanted; strangely enough I kept coming home no later than before. I am realizing the little things I do naturally on my own, and can guide myself in the right direction. I feel the wrinkles in the relationship with my parents beginning to iron out into smooth sailing of understanding. I have grown up, maybe not completely, maybe not visually to others, but to myself I have received a precious gift from myself . . . maturity.

Countdown

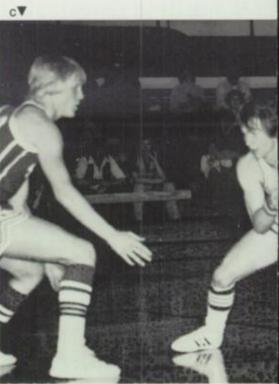

As I sat in journalism class copy reading a story, I looked up at the calendar to check a date of an event. At first glance it annoyed me that there were so many more of dull routine school days to go until I graduate. I started counting the exact number of days as I had so many times before. My new count shocked me instead of making me feel better. I realized that the end of my high school years was closer than I had thought.

I suddenly became frightened. Leaving home and making my own decisions were experiences I was not quite ready to accept. I didn't want to leave school and my friends; I liked being eighteen and a Chaparral senior. If only it could last for awhile. Graduation for me means some big changes in my life.

Why do people have to graduate, I thought, it is so much fun with no responsibilities and pressures? I am beginning to realize how much fun I am having and how much I am going to miss it. I can't stop or even slow down time. So I decided to make the best of the rest of my senior year and enjoy it to the fullest.

My Tree

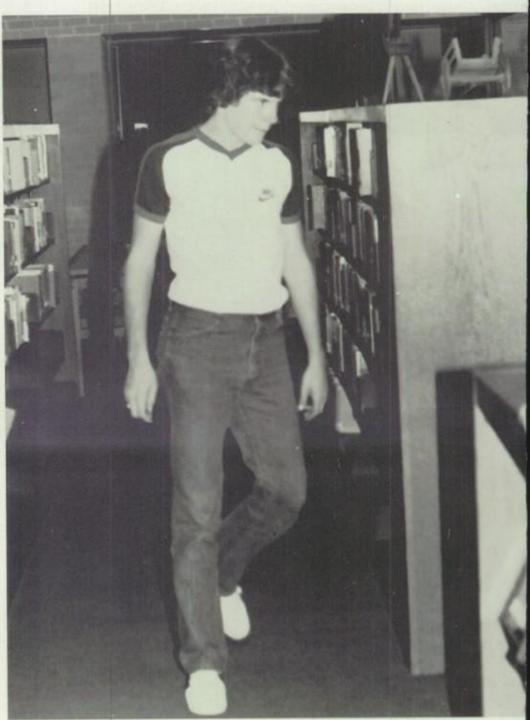

There is a tree in the pasture that is very special to me. When I was seven, my sister and I packed our lunch and took it to the pasture tree. We would climb up into it and stay all day. Older, we hung from the limbs or jumped from the highest branch, talking and laughing. Then for a while, I didn't go down to the pasture; I was just too old for playing in a silly old tree. Then as a teenager, I found that I needed to go down to my tree and have private talks with my sister about growing up, liking boys, or having fights with friends. Sometimes, even now, I go to the tree by myself, climb up in the branches and just sit there for a while to think.

What a Sight

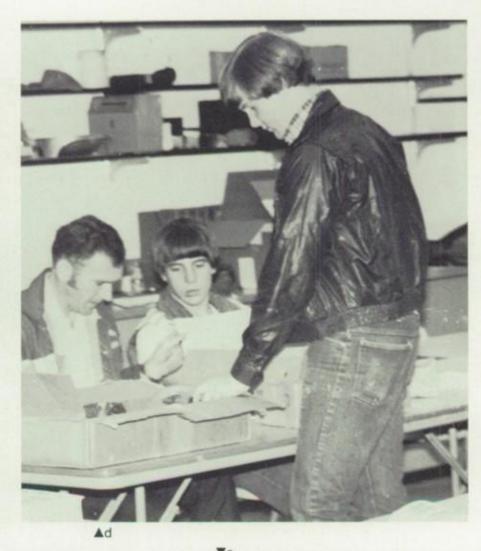

The page grew dim as I strained to decipher the words in my government book. The leaves whispered in the cool summer breeze and a beautiful orange-pink color was glowing on the horizon signaling the sunset's beginning. The reds, pinks, and oranges started mixing, each taking a little from the others to create new and totally different colors. The sky looked as though it were a wet water color picture that was running. Trying to study, I kept looking at the sky and watching the blue and purple creep into the picture. It looked like a dish of rainbow sherbet.

State champions, Johnny Helms, Rusty Hostetler and Jerry Quick led the Roadrunner matmen to a third place state finish. Coach Rochholz took six men to the state meet in Hays including Gary Wohlschlegel, Joe Longbine and Roger Downing — topping off the most successful wrestling season in Chaparral history. They had previously taken 2nd in regionals at Andale then came back to win sub-state held here at Chaparral with 111 team points. This year's team stood out in many ways. They were capable of pinning their opponent in 10 seconds. As a team they had 242 near falls, 221 takedowns, 187 match wins, 156 reversals, 96 escapes. People rushing about, paper boxes everywhere, juniors, Mr. Hottman making last minute adjustments. Suddenly prom is only one week away. Folding napkins, hanging ceilings and searching for the perfect date. Dragging out, dusting off your best manners for that one special evening. Last minute preparations and the final touches are added during the hectic worknight before. Confusion, and continuous work for seven hours complete the sunken ship by Saturday afternoon. Girls in formals and boys in suits and tuxes enjoy one evening in the "Lost City of Atlantis" dancing to the band "Jinx," while trying to keep their gold fish alive until arriving home.

Enjoying God's Beauty

In mid-summer, I silently approached the shore of the lake. I listened to the trees whispering in the breeze and the birds adding their pleasure. I waded into the water, sat down in it and became lost in the scenery. I began to feel my toes tickling. Looking down, I saw minnows nibbling at me. The quieter I remained, the longer they stayed. I lost track of all time.

Being Alone

There are times when I like being alone so I can learn to cope and survive times. Today everyone makes solitude sound terrible. Half the songs on the radio are about the joy of love and togetherness; the other half is about the pain of being alone.

There have been times when my friends asked me to go out, and once we were there, I couldn't stand being around them. Before the night is over, I wish I had stayed home and listened to the radio. I've found that if I really try, I can have just a good a time alone as with fifteen other friends.

Lunchroom Eaters

There are three types of eaters in the lunchroom: petite, moderately neato and chow-hounds.

The petite eater eats with skill and grace. Every bite is a well practiced maneuver. A fork neatly held in the fingers, pokes miniature morsels of food into the mouth. Bites are usually small enough to starve a gerbil and are never spilled or dropped.

The moderately neato group just eats in a regular way. They always follow the same food pattern every day. One moderately neato eater in the lunchroom eats meat, carbohydrates, vegetables, dessert and finishes off the dinner with a cool milk.

The chow-hounds are the fun ones to watch. They act as if the food wasn't dead. The chow-hounds mutilate their food by shredding it with a fork, and then shoveling it into their mouths with a spoon. Chow-hounds get in a hurry too. Often they start throwing food into their mouth so fast, they miss. The food will hit their nose and will roll down onto the chair. Even this won't stop them. They'll eat it off the chairs!

Last Time Together

Pop Concert is the only time of year during Chaparral Singers that the whole group can act crazy and have a good time. There was only two weeks to work on Pop Concert numbers and get them ready. "Celebration" was the opening number. Later Life Savers flew through the air to land on the heads of an auditorium full of people as the group sang TV Commercial songs in "Stay Tuned." Seniors sing solos and cry together as they performed their last number, "Movin' On." Todd Dautel and Mr. B designed the multi-colored riser set with rainbows of crepe paper and Mr. Harmon and Mickey Lear lit the stage with strong blues and reds.

Kansas Thunderstorm

A developing Kansas thunderstorm looks like a disorganized group of cottonballs in the sky. As the day progresses, however, the cottonballs unite and one by one; they form one big cloud. Magically growing and swelling, the billowing edges and mushrooming top dwarf all objects near by, giving the young storm a powerful appearance.

Several hours after the big cloud is formed, nature seems to transform good to evil as the thunderstorm turns dark and shadowy, bringing secondary features to life. Thunder is heard from the very heart of the storm. Its deep bellowing roar warns of the coming event. Lightning flashes out like fangs from the heavens. The wind blows with fierce intensity and has a sick-sweet smell to it. Finally it begins to rain and the storm is at its mightiest.

Later, when the storm is gone, the sun breaks through the clouds in glorious victory. The wind subsides and has a fresh clean smell about it. All living creatures spring out of hiding with renewed activity. What seemed to be evil is in reality a righteous blessing . . . nature's mystery.

State Music Troubles

State music contest was an unusual experience this year. Our buses were the main cause of our trouble. Two of the three buses got lost and had to back track. All three buses were stopped by the Highway Patrol because Vickey and Janell Hughbanks didn't get off where they were supposed to. First stop was Central High in Salina where we watched the band warm-up in the parking lot. We then listened to the I rated performance. Next we traveled to Marymount College, climbed up and down hills and almost passed out from the heat, but sang our best and impressed the judges who gave us a I. Mixed Ensemble, Men's Glee and many solos received I's.

In the world outside our school, people made news. Sandra O'Connor was nominated to the Supreme Court, a first for women. We glued our eyes to the TV as Prince Charles of England married a commoner, Lady Diana Spencer. Two strikes affected our lives, baseball and air traffic controllers. The baseball season split in two as players negotiated for higher pay, leaving us more time for swimming, jogging and picnicking, since we weren't watching our favorite teams. Air traffic controllers were surprised to find President Reagan was serious when he threatened and then took away their jobs, so traveling became difficult.

The mystery of the Atlanta murders, in which 21 young blacks were killed, was solved as Wayne Williams was tried and convicted. Anwar Sadat was assassinated. Reagonomics tightened our budgets, affecting senior's financial aid for college.

Our school was altered with a new face sitting at a smile on his face and a take charge attitude, Mr. Reynolds jumped in and accepted all the challenges as well as accepting everyone as his friend. Makin' a Name: Seniors

We waited four years for that magic name . . . SENIOR . . . four years of history. Our senior year found us welcoming a new principal and fighting against the highway-side landfill. We have participated in CTL football and basketball championships three years and sang in the musicals, SOUND OF MUSIC, CARNIVAL, and this year's GUYS AND DOLLS. This year we wrestled to three individual state championships and one honorable mention All American, debated to win the 4A state tournament, and earned third place in state girls basketball tournament. We have been MAKIN' A NAME.

Makin' a Future: Underclassmen

Three years of high school are spent as an underclassman. As freshmen, seniors seem so old. There are so many worries: What clubs do I join? Do I go out for cheerleader? Sophomores are no longer scared of getting their heads flushed down the toilet and no longer fear freshman P.E. The junior year is fun, planning for prom, dating regularly and running for important school offices, and taking photography, astronomy, and family life.

Makin' a Void: Closing

Makin' friends . . . students and staff . . . makin' progress in our education . . . makin' changes in our personalities . . . makin' scores for our teams . . . makin' a name for ourselves and our school . . . most of all makin' a difference in our world . . . we grew, matured, and now must say "Goodbye" to those of us who are makin' a void.
